Affecting Becognition

A few years ago in working to establish a new communication between shafts of n mine at Faliklu, the enpltol of Dalecarlia, the body of a miner was discovered in a state of perfect preservation and impregnated with vitrialie water. It was quite soft, but hardened on being exposed to the air. No one could identify the body; it was merely remembered that the accident by which he had thus been burjed in the lason of the earth had taken place above fifty years ago. All inquiries about the name of the sufferer had already ecasul, when a decrepit ald woning, supported on crutches, showly advanced towards the corpse, and knew it to be that of a young man to whom she had been promised in marriage more than half a century ago. She threw herself on the corpse which had all the appearance of a brouse statue, bathed it with tears, and fainted with joy at having once more beheld the object of her affections. It is easier to conceive than trace the singular contrast afforded by that couple; the one buried above fifty years ago, still retaining the appearnace of youth, while the other, weighed down by ago, evinced all the fervency
